"Congratulations to everyone who finished the 1988 Budget Melbourne Marathon. And particularly to those who achieved a personal best. To reach those goals is worth all the pain of preparation. Believe me, I know!

Minister for Sport and Recreation

I am pleased to see that the eleventh Budget Melbourne Marathon, sponsored by Budget Rent A Car, was again a highly successful event which attracted 3706 entrants, 502 of who were from interstate and overseas (an increase on last year) and 991 first time marathoners.

Australian male participants fared much better this year and achieved places in the top three. First place was won by Irishman, Tom Hughes, followed by Russell Foley of Tasmania and Mark Boucher, Victoria, in third place.

Victorian runner Coral Farr took first place in the female participants and Margaret Reddan from Queensland and Trudy Fenton of South Australia were again placed second and third respectively.

Following the successful inclusion of the Victorian Athletic Association Marathon Championships in the ninth and tenth Melbourne Marathons, these again formed part of the eleventh marathon.

The Department of Sport and Recreation sponsored three clinics for intending participants and these were centred in Ballarat, Shepparton and Melbourne affording first time marathoners and others the opportunity to gain advice on training techniques, nutrition and other valuable information.

Popular additions to the day's activities were the inclusion of two major Marafun events, which were jointly sponsored by Budget and the Victorian Health Promotion Foundation. These were a Marafun Mayors' Walk, a non competitive walk of 6.2 kms through the Botanical Gardens finishing up at the Marathon's finish banner and a Marafun Kids' Run divided into two sections, for Under 13s (a run of 2.5 kms) and for 13 to 17 years of age (a distance of 5 kms). All the entrants of the Kids' Run received goodie bags containing items from various sponsors.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend my thanks to the various sponsors who have regularly supported this popular event, particularly Budget Rent A Car, QANTAS, Mayne Nickless Computer Services, HSV Channel 7, The Met, Melbourne City Council, St Kilda Road Travelodge, Radio 3MP, adidas, Mobil, Cabot Stains, Australian Airlines and the City of Frankston.

The excellent support of the Victoria Police, the St Johns Ambulance Brigade, the Australian Sports Medicine Federation, doctors and paramedics is also gratefully acknowledged, as well as all the work put in by local councils, athletic clubs and the participating athletes.

Finally, I would like to thank the Marathon Committee who worked so tirelessly to stage this the eleventh Melbourne Marathon. As usual, a most enjoyable day was had by all participants, their families and friends and we look forward to being involved with the twelfth Budget Melbourne Marathon.

Budget MELBOURNE MARATHON

Dear Marathoner,

Congratulations on finishing the 1988 Budget Melbourne Marathon. This year was the eleventh running of the marathon which was an endorsed Bicentennial event in this special year of national celebration.

The Budget Melbourne Marathon continues to attract a large group of community runners intent on putting their body to the test over the traditional Frankston to Melbourne marathon course. In researching Australia's marathon history, it is interesting to note the first marathon in Victoria was conducted over a Frankston to Melbourne course in 1909. The race was won by Andrew Syme from N.S.W. in 3:04:26. Marathon running has come a long way since then as we witnessed 3707 entrants gather in Frankston on October 9th to run the Bicentennial Budget Melbourne Marathon.

To our 1988 winners, Tommy Hughes (North Ireland) and Coral Farr (Victoria), congratulations. Hughes ran a brilliantly judged race to eventually hold out Russell Foley of Tasmania 2nd and Mark Boucher Victoria 3rd. In the women's section, Farr had a great duel with Reddan and Fenton before going on to record a most popular win. To the V.A.A. State Champions, Mark Boucher and Coral Farr, congratulations! Russell Foley, our first Australian will compete in our Sister City Lake Kawaguchi Marathon in 1989. Coral Farr our first Australian woman will compete in the Osaka Ladies Marathon in January, 1989. Our second Australian, male and female, Mark Boucher and Margaret Reddan will compete in the Long Beach Pacific Rim Marathon Championship in Long Beach, California, U.S.A. in May, 1989. Good luck to each of you.

Thank you to Bob Ansett and his company Budget Rent a Car, our major sponsor. Congratulations to Bob in finishing his second marathon, indeed a great example to the community. To all sponsors, who played a major role in the success of the marathon, thank you, we are indeed grateful for your support.

The committee decided to continue honouring ten year 'spartans', those runners who run ten Melbourne Marathons. This year, there were 74 runners who achieved their tenth Melbourne Marathon to become the 1988 Spartans. Congratulations.

The associated events in 1988 were of a high standard. Three clinics, supported by the Department of Sport & Recreation were conducted in Ballarat, Shepparton and Melbourne. Guest speakers included Chris Wardlaw, and John Landy supported by Dr. Peter Larkins and his panel of professional speakers. The clinics were well attended and highly successful.

This year saw the introduction of the 'Marafun' events, Mayors' Walk and Kids' Run. Many thanks to Budget and the Victorian Health Promotion Foundation as joint sponsors of these events. The walk is designed to promote healthy living in the community, and the walk through the Royal Botanic Gardens achieved this objective and was a great success. The Kid's Run was also well supported, we are confident the marafun events will grow in 1989.

To the army of volunteers on the day, thank you for a magnificent job. To David Edwards and his support crew, well done. A special thanks to my own staff who worked so tirelessly this year and also the committee of Melbourne Marathon Incorporated.

Melbourne Marathon Incorporated were delighted to host the 5th World AIMS (Association of International Marathons and Road Races) Congress. Race Directors from around the world met at a most successful Congress. We were proud to play a small part in the direction of world marathon running.

Finally warm greetings to our 74 overseas entrants from 18 countries who joined us this year. I hope your visit was a most enjoyable one.

To all competitors, please join us in 1989, we look forward to receiving your entry.

Warm regards,

Ted Paulin

A GREAT DAY FOR THE IRISH

by Len Johnson of The Age

Any day you finish a marathon is a good day, but don't ever let anyone tell you that 9 October, 1988 was a great day for a marathon.

The overcast skies and occasional rain squalls weren't too bad (except for spectators and the wonderful volunteer officials and drink and aid station attendants). It was, in fact, a remarkably similar day to that in 1982 on which Bill Rodgers set the race record.

The wind, though, was another matter entirely. A solid westerly blew into the runners faces for most of the race, slowing times and making running miserable.

It was contrary. Melbourne had experienced quite a few northerly winds leading up to the race. When the predicted cool change arrived on race eve, it seemed that conditions would be favourable.

But for a matter of a few degrees, they would have been, too. That's all it would have taken to shift the wind around to the south enough to offer some assistance, rather than persistent frustration.

Frustration was evident in the pack in which I was running around Beach Road. As rain threatened, one bloke muttered, more or less to himself — 'Come on, you bastard, rain!'

If he thought that rain meant the wind would drop, he knew within minutes that he was wrong.

What was wrong with the 1988 Budget Melbourne Marathon was obvious as we stood on the line. Intangible, but almost as obvious, was what was right about it. The great majority of marathoners — and I was attempting to rejoin them after a five-year absence — are in it for the enjoyment of setting themselves a challenging goal, and attaining it.

For them, for us, whatever the conditions added to our times would be more than compensated by increased pride in achieving our goal under atrocious conditions.

THE RACE

Tommy Hughes might not be a name which stands with Bill Rodgers, Bill Scott, Andrew Lloyd or Juma Ikangaa in marathoning history, except for one thing. Hughes is a winner of the Melbourne Marathon, and his effort in running a negative split in this year's conditions ranks with most performances we have seen in the race.

So does that of Russell Foley of Tasmania in doing a 'pb' to finish second and Seaford's Mark Boucher in hanging on for third on his marathon debut. Coral Farr was not a debutante, but the Ringwood resident was running her first marathon following impressive progress since running 3:09:27 in the 1982 Melbourne race. Farr's win, after a strong challenge from two-time winner Marg Reddan, just before the 30-kilometre mark, was a strong performance.

And if there was a highlight on a grey Melbourne marathon day, what about Coral Farr's reaction as she crossed the line, arms raised, a huge smile of sheer joy. There must have been relief, too, just at finishing and at fighting back to defeat Marg Reddan, albeit in a slower time than expected.

Farr's was the local victory and Mark Boucher's the only other local place medal, though pre-race discussion gave a local a great chance of winning for the first time since 1981, when Andrew Lloyd completed his hat-trick. The international component of this year's race was down, adding the Olympic Games into an already-crowded international marathon calendar, meant there was not much talent to go round.

Umbe Slaa, a Tanzanian 2:12:23 runner and third in the 1986 Melbourne race, looked the favourite, but his late arrival — Saturday morning — boded ill. Tommy Hughes, from Maghera in Northern Ireland, boasted an exotic record with wins at home, in Derry, Ballymond and Belfast, and abroad, in Marrakech (on the road to Morocco?). Hughes even has a brother in Sydney and reportedly may settle there. As all Melburnians know, you can't get more exotic than Sydney!

Then there was Doug Orr, Canadian-born and educated grandson of an Anzac, Kiwi citizenship on his father's side, living and working in Sweden where he first got serious about his running.

Fellows like Laurie Adams, the former Welsh international now a Gold Coast Aussie, must have felt a little ordinary in such multi-national company. Together with Des Woods, another Kiwi, Russell Foley and Victorians Paul James, Damien Cook and Mark Boucher, he must have put himself in with a chance.

When the gun went off at Mile Bridge, Frankston at 8am, and Robin Rishworth dashed off to an early lead, one of the invited runners asked a local in the lead pack whether he was anyone to worry about. It was a tough question, which could have been answered something along the lines that he was unlikely to stay there long, despite having the ability to do so.

Rishworth went through the five-kilometre point in 15 minutes 30 seconds, the main bunch 14 seconds behind.

At 10 kilometres, reached in 32:30, there were 11 in the leading pack — Hughes, Foley, Boucher, Orr, Slaa, Adams, Cook, a Kiwi, Des Woods, Greg McMahon, a Melbourne runner with a best of 2:24 and South Australians Jim Mack and Gary Zeuner. Zeuner, a former national 3000 metres steeplechase champion, had been caught up in the airline dispute and had only arrived in Melbourne on race-eve with minimal time to organise himself to get to the start.

The next two five-kilometre splits slowed further, 16:48 and 16:46 as the leaders reached 20 kilometres in 66:04. The pack was thinning, however, and at the half-way mark — 69 minutes 43 seconds — Boucher, Foley and Hughes were running together with Slaa and Adams dropping back.

Past half-way the weather started to improve and the race to heat up. At first it was Foley doing most of the pushing as the leading three hit 25 kilometres in 82:35, the 16:31 split being the race's fastest since the five to 10km split along the relatively-sheltered Nepean Highway.

As they left the hillier part of Beach Road and raced towards Brighton, 25 to 30km took 16:22, nine seconds less. Hughes had been fairly quiet in the pack until then — "I tried to stay out of the wind early to conserve energy," he said later. Now, with his energy supplies undepleted, he started to exert a little more influence.

Mark Boucher had already found the race more physical than he would have liked. In the first 10 kilometres, he had tripped in the jockeying in the pack and crashed heavily to the road.

He had escaped that incident with nothing more than a graze, but now Boucher was discovering the more insidious manner in which tiredness creeps up on you in a marathon. His running pace felt comfortable, but his legs did not and he dropped back.

Then, just past 30 kilometres, Foley provided a graphic, and literal, demonstration of ignoring the warning signs of thirst when he crashed into a signpost indicating a drink station. He ran along wringing his wrist for a few hundred metres, but luckily escaped more serious injury.

This confusion of the literal and figurative has happened before. In 1980, British marathoner Bernie Ford told a reporter after he failed to finish the Moscow Olympic marathon: "I hit the wall." After some problems in translation, it would seem, this news reached British newspaper, the Daily Telegraph, which duly reported: "Bernie Ford became disoriented and ran off the road at 30 kilometres and hit a wall."

Anyway, next time you read the advice — "You need a drink before you think you need a drink. Don't ignore the signs," — don't just consider the obvious meaning!

Foley successfully avoided the drink signs from then on but he had no answer to Hughes, who continued to pile on the pressure with 16:18 and 16:17 for his next two five-kilometre splits.

Hughes was victim of a bizarre incident at the top of Fitzroy Street. A lane was closed off for the runners, but as he went to turn into St. Kilda Road, Hughes was directed to the wrong side of the barriers and found himself dicing with the cars.

"They had to stop for me, because I wasn't going to stop for them," said Hughes. Once put back on the right tram, so to speak, Hughes was unchallenged to the finish at the Arts Centre. He crossed the line in 2:18:44, a second half of 68:59 after a first of 69:45.

Foley never dropped far back enough to allow Hughes to relax completely and finished next in 2:19:26, an improvement of over a minute on his best, which was fine running in the conditions. Foley won a trip to the Lake Kawaguchi marathon.

Despite his early fall and being dropped off past 30km, Mark Boucher too had reason to be pleased with his 2:20:51 in his third marathon, Damien Cook, who hung onto the leading group for the first 20 kilometres, equalled his best marathon placing in fourth and his 2:23:21 could have been close to a sub-2:20 in better conditions.

New Zealander Peter Handcock came through to finish next in 2:24:42. In sixth place, and taking third in the Victorian title was Peter Burke, was one of the few to run a 'pb' in the conditions.

Coral Farr had looked the class of the women's field, so it must have been as much a shock to her as everyone else when Marg Reddan caught her around the 28-kilometre point at the bottom of South Road.

Reddan did not stop to exchange plesantries, steaming straight past and into a 30-metre lead. It did not look good for Farr against a previous two-time winner, but she knuckled down and regained the lead for good at 30 kilometres.

"I felt tired mentally but my legs just kept going," said Farr afterwards. If true, that makes Coral a rarity amongst marathoners most of whom experience exactly the opposite feeling in the latter stages of the race!

Farr's 2:47:38 was a little slower than expected before the race of a runner who is regularly around 34 minutes for 10 kilometres on the road. Certainly the conditions were bad, and Farr has won herself a trip to Osaka in January where she will undoubtedly find the conditions and competition better.

Reddan was second, just over two minutes behind in 2:49:44, with South Australia's Trudy Fenton third in 2:53:09.

The conditions were the story of the race. From a 2:37 runner's perspective, the first part along Nepean Highway was not too bad, as there was enough shelter from the buildings along the beach side of the road. From Mordialloc to Brighton around Beach Rd, however, the wind was always into the runners. It was a lot easier to run on the centre of the road wing of the pack, whenever you moved to the left or the front, the wind straight away hit you.

I mentioned in my report in next day's Age that it was possibly the worst conditions the race had ever been run in. Mr John R Fisher of Kilsyth wrote to me ever so gently reminding me of the 1979 race, when a northerly blew along the highway (the race then followed the highway) and temperatures reached 30.

I won't split hairs and certainly don't want another hot day next year by way of comparison. When it's hot, though, a drink and a sponge at least cool you down. In this year's race, there was virtually no respite.

In 1978, the City to Surf arbitrarily added two minutes onto everyone's finish time because of a false start. That resulted in Chris Wardlaw recording one of the slower winning times in beating one of the best fields. I ran that year, too, and six years later, in far inferior form, ran a near 'pb' on a day when there was not a false start.

Maybe Ted Paulin could apply similar logic to this year's marathon. What about knocking two minutes off everyone's time for the conditions, Ted? What a lovely bonus that would be for the 3000-plus who endured one of marathoning's more-forgettable days to notch up one of their more-memorable performances.

THE SPARTANS

The concept of recognising those participants running their tenth marathon in our 1987 tenth anniversary marathon, was enthusiastically received by our first Spartans. The name 'Spartan' was derived from the ancient Greek city of Sparta where the inhabitants were known as Spartans. They were hardy, unflinching persons of courage and endurance — this certainly describes our Spartans.

The Melbourne Marathon Inc Committee decided to honour each participant achieving their tenth Melbourne Marathon, not necessarily consecutive runs, each year from and including 1988. All new Spartans will receive a green singlet identifying their achievement.

This year there were 74 new Spartans, proudly running their tenth marathon, the oldest was Bernie Brennan (61) and the youngest Anthony Srebrenovski (25). John Bell, an accountant with the City of Nunawading started running with the Tally Ho Fitness Group in 1978, he has now achieved the Spartan status and joins several of his club mates with the distinction. To all our 1988 Spartans, a special congratulations.

Of the 1987 Spartans, 73 ran their eleventh marathon including two women, Ann Callaghan, South Croydon and Shirley Young of Blackburn. Damien Cook was the first Spartan running an excellent fourth place. When you consider Damien ran just over four hours in his first marathon in 1978, the improvement is amazing. Our oldest Spartan was Dick Kirkman, 70 years old. If you see any of our Spartans in their singlets out training, please give them a hoy, they are our high achievers.

BUDGET BICENTENNIAL BREAKFAST

Compere Drew Morphett, HSV7 personality interviews Tommy Hughes, Northern Ireland.

Off to 'brekky' at the Southern Cross on Saturday, October 1st, the lead up to the 1988 Budget Melbourne Marathon had begun. The timing was perfect, we had spent the week watching the Seoul Olympics and the Olympic Marathon was 24 hours away. The highlight of the morning was a telephone hook-up to our Marathon Olympians in Seoul, Robert De Castella, Steve Moneghetti and Brad Camp.

Bob Lay, National Promotions Manager, adidas, did a fantastic job in co-ordinating the interviews in Seoul. When one considers the difficulty in getting the boys together at 8.00 a.m., plus the tight security, we were fortunate to have Bob on the spot.

Compere for the morning was Drew Morphett, HSV7 sporting personality. The interviews from our Olympians had everyone sitting on the edge of their chairs. We were all hoping for a great performance by our boys and certainly the enthusiasm at the breakfast echoed down the wire. Robert, Steve and Brad had all looked at the course and agreed it was a fast course — the only major problem being the weather. The best marathon runners in the world were assembled for a great Olympic Marathon.

Drew introduced Josie Ansett, who apologised for Bob who was unavailable. Josie announced Bob would be running the marathon and passed on his best wishes to all the competitors.

Tom Hafey, former coach of V.F.L. Club 'The Swans' was introduced by Drew with a history of his magnificent career. I am sure the welcome put a lump in Tom's throat and gave an indication of the public support for this great coach. Tom spoke of commitment in reaching your objective and how this related to the marathon.

Tommy Hughes, our first Irish runner was a Gaelic footballer before entering his first marathon with a three hour debut. He quickly became hooked on running and this year has won three marathons including the Morocco International Marathon. Tommy mentioned he had applied to settle in Australia and was anxious to do well in the run.

Brian Doyle, one of Australia's top comedians entertained us with a wonderful repertoire that had our jaws aching. ICPOA was there handing out 'The Age' Budget Melbourne Marathon supplements and helping with the many prizes distributed on the morning. The major prize 2 return tickets to the Gold Coast and four night's accommodation at the Gold Coast International Hotel from Australian Airlines and the Southern Pacific Hotel Corporation was won by Mrs. Soutter of Vermont South.

Ted Paulin, Race Director, introduced all the 1988 Spartans who had come along to celebrate their tenth running of the Marathon on October 9th. The morning was a great success and will be a regular feature each year. Don't be disappointed in 1989, book your table early.

BUDGET MELBOURNE MARATHON CITY OF ST. KILDA COURAGE AWARD — 1988

Michael Wiggins is the recipient of the 1988 Courage Award, which was presented by the Mayor of St. Kilda, Cr. Elaine Miller, at the presentation awards function, Melbourne Town Hall, on Friday, October 11, 1988.

Prior to 1987 Michael was a committed runner, a non-smoker, non-drinker who followed a modified Pritikin diet. His training included six days per week running plus two weekly sessions at the gym.

In 1987 a lump developed in his groin which was diagnosed as cancerous and removed. The post-operative treatment included extensive chemotherapy which has side effects of extreme physical discomfort and quite severe effects of tiredness which leaves you weak and depressed.

Throughout his ordeal Michael retained a very positive attitude to the illness and its treatment. He was encouraged by his doctors to maintain a normal lifestyle; he continued running, despite a feeling of continuing tiredness and in January of this year was given a clear bill of health and told he was in total remission.

His determination in entering and finishing the 1988 marathon depicts him as a worthy winner of the 1988 City of St. Kilda Courage Award.

St. Kilda Courage Award Trophy

The Council of the City of Frankston in this Bi-centennial year, has once again showed its support of the Melbourne Marathon.

Firstly by the sponsoring of the medallions, then hosting the eventual winner Irish runner Tommy Hughes and Ted Paulin at a Civic Reception, and the donation of the City of Frankston trophies for the first male and female over the age of 40 to finish the race.

The success of any marathon lies in the planning, and the City of Frankston once again provided its expertise.

On marathon day, the interest shown by the people of Frankston added to a spectacular start — a wall of over 3,000 runners moving along the Nepean Highway parallel with the foreshore of the beautiful and popular Seaford beach, and local residents cheering the runners along.

The City of Frankston is proud to be involved with the Melbourne Marathon which has become internationally known as a major event.

THE FAMILY FIESTA

The best thing about a marathon for most participants is finishing. So the finish, itself, has to be something special — something that gives people the chance to relax and recover, to meet up with fellow foot-sloggers, families and friends to savor the sense of achievement. Those lawns that need cutting, or the dog that's overdue for a bath, ought to seem miles away.

That's why the Family Fiesta, sponsored by Melbourne City Council and HSV7, is always such a success. This year the post-marathon celebration took on an even broader brief with the inclusion of the wind-up to Marafun. And what an odd mixture of sights and sounds greeted the marathoners as they began to file into the Alexandra Gardens, like soldiers returning to camp.

Kids clutching Marafun showbags were darting between FEIPP's clowns, buskers and face-painters, there was folk-dancing from foreign parts and some indigenous handball competitions with footballers from VFL, VFA, VAFA, and further along NBL basketball stars gave demonstration 'shoot-outs' at specially installed goal rings.

Hunger pangs were easily catered for by ethnic food stalls offering everything from souvlakis to fare from a wok. Or you could sit down to Devonshire tea in the Sir Thomas Lipton Plantation Tea Garden, staffed by hard-working Jaycees. Then there was the stall that seemed to have been plucked from Vic Market, with vocal members of the Retail Fruiterers' Association dispensing more than five tonnes of free produce — more Jonnies, Grannies, oranges and watermelons than you could point a banana at. It was enough to make Con the Fruiterer misty-eyed. Beautiful!

Sub three-and-a-half hour marathoners could catch the Marafun prizewinner, or head straight over to 'recovery corner' where it was all hands on deck for associates of the Melbourne School of Tactile Therapies who massaged away aches and pains from 800 road-fatigued legs, including those that had carried Budget chief Bob Ansett. Nearby, other sets were submerged in spa tubs, and the hot bliss gently eased minds into neutral.

That air of relaxation seemed to pervade the large crowd that sprawled on the grass for presentations of trophies, air tickets and cash prizes to a wide range of marathon category winners. The ceremony was conducted by HSV7 newsreaders Kate Dunstan and Peter Mitchell, who called on representatives of Budget Melbourne Marathon's generous sponsor bank to make their respective awards. But soon it was all over, and as people started to drift away, twos and threes could still be heard discussing times and drink-stops — and tentative strategies for next year.
